PERSONALITIES

BY JOSEPH KAYE

(New York Special to The Canadian Jewish Review)

The outstanding artistic personage at this moment in our circle here is Isa Kremer, the singer of folk-songs and ballads. She gave a concert at Carnegie Hall last week and revealed her art to Americans.

An artist, especially a singer, is severely handicapped if her manager be of an exuberantly enthusiastic nature. Thus, after being informed that Isa Kremer's career read like a tale from the Arabian Nights, that there is not another living like her, that her concerts are sold out instantaneously upon announcement of the date and place, that Isa Kremer, like Sarah Bernhardt, became famous overnight, that the luster of her fame spread throughout Russia in an illuminated, glittering and sparkling train, and many other things like that—are aroused certain expectations in the hearts of the listeners which eventually react ungratefully upon the recipient of the manager's literary talents.

Heard under ordinary circumstances Isa Kremer would have been called a very fine artist and predictions for a successful tour in America made for her. The critics would have been inclined to devote extra paragraphs and care to her, under the flattering impression that they had discovered a new singer of ability. As it was the impressions of Isa Kremer the day after were generally reserved. Taken by her manager's measure Mme. Kremer had fallen considerably short.

Isa Kremer's art is that made famous by Mme. Yvette Guilbert. She takes folk-songs and such elementary ballads as can also be considered folk-songs and interprets them, or rather, lives through them histrionically.

Such art is always an intimate one. It is best understood and appreciated in a small auditorium where the singer and listener can be close in presence as well as in sympathy. Then such homely tales as that of a china doll who had no heart because she was hollow and of the dangers that confront a little boy who will not go to sleep when his mother tells him to, are enjoyed. In a vast auditorium like Carnegie Hall most of the delicacy of the folk-song is lost; what remains is a wearisome repetition of strophic ditties, sung in many languages—not understood by three parts of the audience and a series of posturings and mimicries by the singer, that become in time inane as well as monotonous.

There is only one way to offset the loss in a folk-song occasioned by a too large auditorium and that is extreme tunefulness in the songs rendered. Everyone loves a good melody, and in spite of our teachers you may safely believe that an agreeable melody atones for a multitude of musical sins. We have seen enormous crowds moved to furious applause by the singing of "Comin' Through the Rye" and "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," because of the melodies of these simple songs. In the program that Isa Kremer offered at her first concert there was hardly a tuneful song in the lot, except for a Yiddish marriage ditty given as an encore and which was the best liked song of the afternoon. Therefore the audience was left lukewarm, a most deadly condition for an audience at folk-song recital to be in.

Here we believe are the two reasons why Isa Kremer did not achieve success expected. But there is a second concert scheduled for this week. The experience of the first may have been valuable to Mme. Kremer.

As a singer Isa Kremer has an expressive soprano that is spoilt at times by a nasal tinge. Her interpretations are instinctive and carry much power. The listener is moreover struck by the grace of her movements. She is a handsome woman and in song "Platocki"—a song of handkerchiefs—her physical illustrations blended with her beauty in a most charming effect.

A fact which will be of especial interest to us is her perfect pronunciation of Yiddish. It takes some courage to sing "Masseltoff" in Carnegie Hall with as dashing and strongly flavored Yiddish as Mme. Kremer gave us. We may look forward to "Forward" featuring her under five-column heads. She is just the type to delight the heart of Abe Cahan.

What we liked Mme. Kremer best in was the Italian street songs, which she sang with an uncouth vivacity that was striking and characteristic. In an old French lullaby she achieved the unusual by bringing forward a chair and singing while seated, impersonating the rocking of the cradle by the mother. That was a most effective piece of work and showed one other way of overcoming the size of the hall. Unfortunately, however, not every song can be supplemented by furniture.

We herewith present to you a new sculptor who is to make his début in New York shortly, and who is the bearer of an unforgetable name. It is Numa Patlegean. We say unforgetable because, if you known anything about memory courses, you will know that by associating this name with Patagonia Numa will remain forever in your memory no matter what happens.

Mr. Patlegean arrived in this country a week ago. He brings with him a Parisian reputation—but we will let the gentleman who sent us the data about the sculptor tell you his story himself. This is one of the rare occasions when we do not redress the information thus provided for your benefit and we do so, first, because it is a very respectfully written story, and, secondly, because its author is an old friend of Anglo-Jewish journalism, namely, Meyer W. Weisgal, one of the editors of the now extinct "Maccabean" and of "The New Palestine." Perhaps you may remember Mr. Weisgal also as the brave and proud young man who astounded his company by saluting, metaphorically, the flag of the Jewish Nation. We are rather hazy on details, but remember distinctly, Mr. Weisgal basked in printer's ink for a long time following that episode.

"An event which will be classed among the most important in the American artistic world," says Mr. Weisgal, "is the exhibition of the works of Numa Patlegean which is to take place in New York at the Sterner Galleries from November 20 to December 5, and in various other cities later on.

"Numa Patlegean is a name not new among those who follow intimately the movements of the art world on the other side of the Atlantic. Even at this distance his name has slowly filtered through. Allusions to his name, at first brief, have gradually given way to increasing attention, until the art world has suddenly come to realize that there is a new figure in its midst for serious consideration.

"To the Jews Patlegean is of particular interest, for he is one of us. The Jew has generally been held to be deficient in the world of art. Whether through lack of native ability or through long prohibition, in accordance with the Second Commandment, the Jew has certainly not held in the world of plastic art a position commensurate with that which he has held in literature, in music, philosophy, etc. Patlegean is one of the men who are helping us to

The Oberammergau Passion Play

A Jewish View

BY L. V. SNOWMAN

Boys are cracking their whips on the roadway, church bells are ringing, a cannon is fired, and crowds are pouring out of the station to scatter themselves among the beer gardens and restaurants. Everything is astir although it is only half-past seven in the morning, for in half an hour there commences the great spectacle of the passion of Christ, which is to last till six o'clock, with a break of two hours for lunch.

The impression has gained ground that the visitors to Oberammergau are all Americans; as a matter of fact these form a drop in the ocean. The whole of Bavaria, Catholic to the core, seems to congregate in the little village to witness the representation of the historical cornerstone of their faith. The village itself is a veritable bazaar of ecclesiastical knick-knacks and the carving of crosses in wood and ivory forms the chief occupation of the inhabitants in the ten years that intervene between each production of the play, which was originally undertaken as a thanksgiving for the delivery of the village from pestilence, and has been periodically revived in fulfillment of the vow made in 1663.

The villagers live their parts, and being forbidden to use "make-up," they are to be seen with their flowing locks and oriental beards carrying your luggage or serving you behind the counter. It may seem that if a Jew came into a society so pervaded with Christian rite and dogma, he would feel oppressed with the insignificance of his position. But to lay Tefillin under the shadow of the Passion Play cross is a ceremony fraught with deepest meaning, for no sooner are the opening words of the play spoken by the prologue:

"Bow ye down in Holy Wonder,
By God's curse, oppressed race!"

than the Jew must be on his guard to defend himself against a succession of malignant accusations.

There are many worthy passages in the history of Jesus, but the story of the so-called betrayal and crucifixion is not to be numbered among them. At Oberammergau they have gathered up the crudest details from the Gospels and distilled from them a succession of scenes which are calculated to show the unoffending Jesus trapped into the power of the Jews, whose relentless hate pursues Him through the trial to the cross, and even then is not satisfied unless His body can be thrown into a criminal's grave.

As a drama the passion play does not exist; it is too long, and there is no adequate sequence of motive and action. It opens with the entry of Jesus into Jerusalem on the eve of Passover, and the scene with the money-changers in the Temple is enacted. There quickly follows the attempt of the priests to get the "prophet from Galilee" into their power.

Palpable inaccuracies soon crowd one on top of another; there are two contemporary high priests—Annas and Caiaphas—which was an impossibility; the Sanhedrin and Council of Priests are confused in every other scene: the Sanhedrin meets at night and on the eve of the Passover—quite unknown in the Jewish law: they have to have resort to the most secret methods to get Jesus into their power, although he is shown to have but a handful of followers; and the famous "kiss of Judas" is for the purpose of pointing out to the soldiers a man who had entered Jerusalem as the cynosure of an enormous crowd but the day before.

No reason is given for the extraordinary enmity which Jesus arouses among the priests, and even when he is condemned to death at the trial it is for an offense for which the Jewish code has no punishment, let alone the capital penalty.

Each act of the play is introduced by the moral talk of the Prologue, followed by a chorale. The chorus comments on the tableaux from the Old Testament, which are represented at frequent intervals and are supposed to be a type of the various scenes of the passion. For this part of the play one can have nothing but praise. The "lebende Bilder" are conceived with artistic taste, and executed with wonderful skill and patience; in some of them, such as scenes from the exodus, several hundreds of people take part. The chorus stand in a line right across the apron of the stage, and the orchestra of fifty is hidden away in the foreground.

In that part of the play following the trial, when Jesus is being led from Annas to Pilate, and from Pilate to Herod and back again to Pilate, the action proceeds more concisely but no less historically. The Romans are whitewashed and the Jews blackened at every opportunity. The story of the unwillingness of Pilate to consent to the execution of a man who was being acclaimed as king of the Jews, is as well-known as it is improbable, considering that the Romans were ever on their guard for the slightest hint of insurrection.

But here the acting reached its climax. It had been superb throughout, as was evidenced by the fact that the motiveless hatred of the priests had not been made to appear ridiculous; but now when Caiaphas had to work the people into a torment of rage against Jesus and even come up to Calvary and, not satisfied with the crucifixion, demand that the bones of the dead be broken before dusk, the impersonator of this part accomplished the greatest piece of acting one could wish to see. He raised what was the lowest kind of melodrama to a great work of art.

The impersonator of Jesus—Anton Lang—was taking the part for the third time, and had become so absorbed in it himself that one forgot at times that it was an assumption. The most difficult part is generally admitted to be Judas. His story is a late accretion to the Gospels, and his yellow robe and money bag are obvious thrusts at the Jew.

Whether or not the earnest Christians who flock for five months in the year to Oberammergau believe what they see on the stage there to be true, is beside the point. The play points an obvious moral, every Jew is represented as a villain (with the exception of the disciples) and the woes of humanity are attributed to the supposed treatment of Jesus. It is clear that such a story—be it true or not—can easily lead to a burning hatred against a whole race.

One wonders whether it is in the spirit of the teaching of the hero of the Passion Play to re-enact such a tale decade after decade.

The Christians stand badly in need of a second Jew to teach them Christianity.

Brig.-Gen. Sir Gilbert Clayton, of England, has been appointed to the office of Civil Secretary of the Palestine Government, succeeding Sir Wyndham Deedes. It is also reported that Sir Gilbert is discussing Transjordanian affairs, on behalf of the Colonial Office, with Emir Abdullah.

Jewish Physicians and Their Influence

Concluded from last week

If thus the social condition of the rabbis, who drew no income from their religious duties, induced them to combine the practice of medicine with their pursuits, great facilities had arisen for mental culture through the establishment of so many schools. Henceforth the Jewish physician is recognized as combining with his professional skill a profound knowledge of theology, mathematics, astronomy, philosophy, music, law. In a singular manner he stands aloof in the barbarian societies among whom he lived, looking down like a philosopher upon their idolatries, permitting or even excusing them like a statesman. Of those who thus adorned the eleventh century was Rabbi Solomon Ben Israel, better known under the abbreviation Raschi, called by his countrymen the Prince of Commentators. He was equally at home in writing commentaries on the Talmud or in giving instructions for great surgical operations, as the Cæsarian section. He was the greatest French physician of his age. Spain during the same century produced a worthy competitor to him, Ebn Zohr, physician to the Count of Seville. His writings were in Hebrew, Arabic, Syriac, and both in prose and verse. He composed a treatise on the cure of diseases and two on fevers. In singular contrast with the superstitious notions of the time, he possessed a correct view of the morbific nature of marsh miasm. He was followed by Ben Ezra, a Jew of Toledo, who was at once a physician, philosopher, mathematician, astronomer, critic, poet. He travelled all over Europe and Asia, being held in captivity for some time in India. Among his medical writings was a work on theoretical and practical medicine, entitled "Book of Proofs." Through the wars, arising in Spain between Mohammedans and Christians, many learned Jews were driven into France, imparting to that country by their presence a new intellectual impulse. Of such were Aben Tybbon, who gave to his own profession a pharmaceutical tendency by insisting on the study of botany and the art of preparing drugs; Ben Kimchi, a Narbonnese physician and grammarian, wrote commentaries on the Bible, sacred and moral poems, a Hebrew grammar. Notwithstanding the opposition of the ecclesiastics, William, the Lord of Montpelier, passed an edict authorizing all persons without exception to profess medicine in the university of his city. This was specially meant for the relief of the Jews, though expressed in a general way. Spain, though she had thus lost many of her learned men, still continued to produce others, of which she had reason to be proud. Moussa Ben Maimon, known all over Europe as Maimonides, was recognized by his countrymen as "the doctor, the great sage, the glory of the West, the light of the East, second only to Moses." He is often designated by the four initials, R.M.B.M.; that is, Rabbi Moses Ben Maimon; or, briefly, Rambam. He was born at Cordova A.D. 1135, and while yet young wrote commentaries on the Talmuds both of Babylon and Jerusalem, and also a work on the calendar, but, embracing Mohammedanism, he emigrated to Egypt, and there became physician to the celebrated Sultan Saladin. The twelfth and thirteenth centuries were prolific of great men, when the Alphonsine tables were calculated for Alphonso, the King of Castile, by Mascha, his Hebrew physician. For long the Jews had been dabbling in free-thinking speculations. Abba Mari, a Marseilles Jew, translated the Almagest of Ptolemy and the Commentary of Averroes upon it. The school of Salerno was still sending forth its doctors. In Rome Jewish physicians were very numerous, the popes themselves employing them. Boniface XIII had for his medical adviser Rabbi Isaac. At this period Spain and France were full of learned Jews; and perhaps partly by their exerting upon the higher classes with whom they came in contact too much influence, for the physician of a Christian prince was very often the rival of his confessor, and partly because the practice of medicine, as they pursued it, interfered with the gains of the Church, the clergy took alarm and caused to be re-enacted and enforced the ancient laws. The Council of Beziers, A.D. 1246, and the Council of Alby, A.D. 1254, prohibited all Christians from resorting to the services of an Israelitish physician. The faculty of Paris caused a decree to be published in 1301, A.D., prohibiting either man or woman of the religion of Moses from practicing medicine upon any person of the Catholic religion. A similar course was also taken in Spain. At this time the Jews were confessedly at the head of French medicine. It was the appointment of one of their persuasion, Profatius, as regent of the faculty of Montpelier, A.D. 1300, which drew upon them the wrath of the faculty of Paris. This learned man was a skillful astronomer; he composed tables of the moon, of the longitudes of many Asiatic and African towns; he determined the obliquity of the ecliptic, his result being honorably alluded to by Copernicus. The animosity of the French ecclesiastics against the Jewish physicians at last led to the banishment of all the Jews from France, A.D. 1306. "It was," says the historian of this event, "a most revolting spectacle to see so many learned men who had adorned and benefited France, proscribed, wanderers without a country or an asylum. Some of them expired of grief upon the road. But though thus driven into exile, these strangers had accomplished their destiny. They had silently deposited in France their ideas. They had sapped the credulity of the higher classes in Europe and taught them to turn away from the supernatural. A clear recognition of their agency in this matter fastened upon them the watchful eye of the Inquisition and made them the victims of its tyranny."

And so it might well be. Out of the Spanish peninsula there had come across the Pyrenees an intellectual influence which reached the populace under the form of a fresh and pleasing literature, and the better classes by novel but unorthodox ideas. To a very great extent the Jews had been its carriers. The result was the overthrow of supernaturalism.

The Petrograd Institute for Advanced Jewish Culture recommended its regular sessions several days ago. The institute, which began to function last year, is of collegiate grade and provides tuition free of charge to students from all parts of the Soviet Republic. A considerable number of young men and women from Minsk and Homel have registered and a group of students who have been granted scholarships by various Jewish communities in Siberia have already arrived to take up their studies. The faculty of the institute counts among its members most of the prominent Jewish scholars of Russia, among them Rabbi Eisenstadt, Chief Rabbi of Petrograd.

Charles Weinberger, of New Orleans, has received a royal order from the King of Italy in recognition of his kindly interest in the cause of needy Italians in Louisiana. Mr. Weinberger is a prominent Mason and active in all Jewish movements.

Channing Pollock is the author of a new play entitled "The Fool," which the Selwyns have just produced at the Times Square Theatre, New York.

Mischa Levitzki, pianist, making his first appearance after a year's absence, in Carnegie Hall, New York, on the evening of November 8, played two of his own compositions. One of them is a waltz which figured recently on the Ruth St. Denis program.

S. S. Abrahams, who has been appointed British Attorney General of the Zanzibar Protectorate, has recently completed a two years' term of service in Mesopotamia, where he held in succession the posts of Advocate General and President of the Civil Court at Basrah.

"HEARTIEST CONGRATULATIONS"

"YE YASHER Ko-Chachem"—"heartiest congratulations and best wishes." These are the sentiments which we wish to express to those interested in the erection of a new Talmud Torah, for which ground was broken just a few days ago. We are gratified that finally a group of public-spirited Jewish bala batim have realized the necessity of establishing a modern Jewish religious school for our growing children. As a result of their untiring energy and undaunted courage, sufficient money has been pledged to start the actual building, the ground having been purchased some time ago. The new Talmud Torah is to be located on Brunswick Avenue and College Street, which site is in the heart of a large Jewish population. No better site could have been chosen, because this section of the city is destined to be even more densely populated by Jews in the years immediately ahead of us.

The architects' plans call for a four-storey building of modern construction, along the best approved school lines, to cost approximately $125,000, on a lot sixty foot frontage by one hundred and twenty in depth. The new Talmud Torah is to have twelve classrooms, a library, a synagog, an assembly hall which will accommodate fourteen hundred people, a gymnasium, swimming-pool, and shower-baths. The many features are designed so the building shall serve, not merely as a Talmud Torah, but also as a communal and social center, where our youth will find wholesome recreation.

Such a building has been an absolute and crying necessity in Toronto for many years. This city, with its Jewish population of from thirty-five thousand to forty thousand, contains approximately eight thousand children of school age, that is, between the ages of six to fifteen. At present there are only two small Talmud Torahs of very poor design and construction, with a total capacity of about seven hundred children. The Jewish Sabbath schools in the city accommodate another eight hundred children, who come once a week on Sunday mornings to receive religious instruction. This makes a total of fifteen hundred out of eight thousand children receiving some kind of systematic Jewish training. For the rest, a small fraction are the innocent victims of the peddlar melammed or the still worse chedarim, which are the most primitive that we have seen anywhere on the American continent. The rest of the children, numbering easily seventy per cent., receive absolutely no religious instruction whatsoever. The products of this kind of melammed and cheder instruction, grow up not only ignorant of our religious and cultural heritage, but with hearts full of resentment and bitterness at the travesty of it all. Is it any wonder, therefore, that the Canadian-made products we already have of this system—or, we should say, lack of system—are indifferent to things Jewish? Their one bitter cry is, that if they are poor Jews, it is not their fault, but the fault of those who were responsible for their bringing-up along Jewish lines.

The birth-right of every Jewish child is a thorough and systematic Jewish education. Yet for years this large Jewish community has continued to neglect this most important of all Jewish communal concerns. We repeat, most important—more important in some ways than most forms of charity, from the point of view of the survival of the Jewish people. Orphanages and hospitals and charitable institutions are necessary, and make a touching and unique appeal to the Jewish heart; but we maintain with the Jewish sages, "Talmud Torah Keneged Kulom." Jewish education surpasses them all. The neglect to rear our children in the religion and culture of the Jew has frequently been the reason for our Christian neighbors establishing missions in the heart of the Jewish neighborhood. At least, so they have contended. Can the Jew afford this challenge of the missionaries?

A Talmud Torah properly conceived and operated is more than a mere safeguard against the proselytising of missionaries. It is more than even a place for religious instruction. It is a place where the Jewish child absorbs knowledge about his people, history, literature and language. In a word, it is a place where the rising Jewish generation receives a cultural training, which will make him, not only a better educated man and woman, a person of finer morals and ethical standards, a better Jew—but thereby also a better Canadian.

The new Talmud Torah is not to be a parochial or separate school. It is to be open for instruction after public school hours, and is designed to complement and supplement the public schools. The Jews of Toronto, if we interpret their sentiments correctly, do not believe in segregating their children from contact with other children of varying religious outlook and national backgrounds. They believe that the public schools are the best places where the best ideals of Canadian citizenship and culture should be taught to all future Canadians, irrespective of race, creed or sex. They believe that theological instruction, frequently disguised under the title of religious teaching, whether it be of the majority or the minority of the citizens, is out of place in the public schools. Religion should be taught in the home and in the religious schools after school hours, which are specially established and maintained for this purpose and not out of the public's taxes, but out of funds privately raised by the different religious groups in the community. Jewish parochial schools are, to our way of thinking, undemocratic because they stand for indoctrination. The Jewish tradition is above all a democratic tradition. Not wealth, but learning, counts. The emphasis in Jewish life is not on the pocket-book but on the book. The am-ha-aretz (uncultured person) is the one usually looked down upon in the Jewish community. The Talmud Torah and the synagog are the two institutions in which the best that is Jewish are embodied. They are the only means that will preserve us from disintegration and disappearance.

It is for these reasons that we are delighted with the fact that the work of building the first modern Talmud Torah in Toronto is being launched, and with God's help will soon be functioning.

It requires courage, to say the least, in times such as these times of economic depression, when people have lost much money, to proceed with the building of a new Talmud Torah. Nevertheless, we feel confident that those who are leading the enterprise will not be deterred by any obstacles which may arise in the course of construction.

To these builders and creators of opportunities for our Jewish youth, we say, "Rak chazak ve-e-motz"—"Be strong and of good courage."

Referring to the community of Toronto, Editor Brickner says:

"The Jewish population of this city numbers about thirty-five thousand. Yet our Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, which includes only ten of the many Jewish charitable institutions and societies, raises a budget of over $60,000 per year. This is almost two dollars per capita, or twice as much as do their non-Jewish friends."

This is a poor showing all-around. In the "Israelite's" home city, the Community Chest receives an average of four dollars per capita for every man, woman and child in the city. The Jewish community spends six dollars per capita, or more, for the local charities, besides contributing this year about ten dollars per capita additional for the relief of the European war sufferers.—American Israelite, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Poale Zion Cultural Association

An evening rich in educational value and wholesome pleasure was afforded at the Standard Theatre, November 13th, on the occasion of the theatrical and concert performance of the Poale Zion Cultural Association, an organization of the national radical youth of Toronto.

Two one-act plays, "The Everlasting Song" by Orenstein and "The Divorce" by Sholom Alechem, depicting respectively the pathos and humor of Jewish domestic life, gave ample opportunity for display of dramatic and interpretative talent. Whether the youthful stature of some of the participants belied the pose of maturity or whether because it is becoming unusual to hear a colloquial and domestic Yiddish flow easily from the lips of modern youth, some of the deepest touches appeared at times droll and amusing. This, however, only added to the good humor and fellowship which prevailed between talent and audience throughout the evening.

Rose and Bertha Bronstein in "The Everlasting Song" gave a sympathetic portrayal of mother and daughter. S. B. Kauffman as the jolly, irresponsible semi-tipsy father shewed more freedom and elasticity. Mr. Sam Hurwitz as the young lover, seemed more timid than fervent.

Mr. Hurwitz's experience, however, stood him in good stead for his role of devoted husband in the play of Sholom Alechem. By the end of the evening he was a more practiced lover. Dora Wilinsky, as his mother-ruled bride, presented an appearance so winning and attractive, that the audience shared keenly with Mr. Hurwitz, the pangs and futile tragedy of the "Get." Rivka Bronstein's fluent characterization of the shrewish wife and mother-in-law, gave that type a freshness it is beginning to lose. S. B. Kauffman, Max Morrison, Mr. Lasonisky and Minnie Goldstein, the last in a small, but remarkably well played role, all ably supported.

Two tableaux, "On the Journey from Babylonia" and "Chalazim in Palestine," æsthetic dancing by Beila Rosen, violin selection from Miss Rubin, and piano by Miss Goodfellow, balanced the evening's entertainment.

Credit is due to Mr. Leo Rosenstein, of the Local Yiddish Company, under whose direction the performance was presented, and to J. Saltzberg, responsible for supervision and administration, for an evening which will remain as a pleasant memory for the capacity audience present.

Baron Edmond de Rothschild is subscribing £2,000 annually for the next five years to the scheme for opening the Faculty of Arts of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. An additional £1,000 annually was subscribed at a meeting in Paris last week, at which the chief rabbi of France presided.

The company from the Jewish theatre at Wilna has just concluded a successful engagement at the Théâtre des Champs Elysées, Paris, where they presented, "Der Dibbuk" and other plays in Yiddish. The company is now duplicating its success in London, and will be over here early next year

THE CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW gently takes us to task for claiming Rebekkah West, the English novelist, as one of the Elders of Zion? Our informant, usually very reliable, told us with the most supreme satisfaction that Miss West was in private life, Regina Miriam Bloch. And now the poor fellow will certainly flee the country when he learns that Miss West wrote a tearful letter to the "Literary Review," saying she wasn't a Jewess, and that she is tired of receiving invitations to Zionist meetings and sisterhood conventions (so are we) and New Year's cards in September. We heard of Miss West's letter even before our Canadian brother reproached us for our shameless adoption of the great novelist, but so slothful and derelict are we in our task, that we forgot all about making a correction. Anyhow we thought it would be fun for Miss West to receive a few more invitations.

THE CHRONICLER JEWISH TRIBUNE.

This same Jewish Tribune, by the way, was guilty only last week of the most "chuzpahdik" gesture in all the archives of modern Jewish journalism. For as long as we, yea, even our fathers in this field can remember, it has been the common practice of small, impoverished and even large prosperous papers to sit down on press day, scissors in hand, and prepare to dissect their contemporaries for a liberal stack of "literature" for the week's presentation. Suppose the editor did forget to attach a credit line or that the printer did drop it into the "hell-box" if attached. Did the obnoxious question of ethics enter in; or did any one fast longer on Yom Kippur day for the deed? Now comes the Jewish Tribune, in this, the year of Their Lord, 1922, iron in its voice, commanding thus: "We shall insist on due credit for all material culled from our columns under penalty of prosecution according to law. We shall not sue for a small sum but we shall insist upon the full penalty allowed us."

Jewish Tribune, time was when you didn't live in New York, but in the hinterland of Portland, Ore. There (Editor's note: We'll be sued for this) you leaned back in the expansive comfort of Jews on Passover Night and used the scissors or nothing.

Some day, if we have time, we're going to collect all the little fellows in the paper business and refuse to clip a single thing from you! Meantime we hope the printer forgers to give you credit for the above clipping and that we are sued and extradited and that the trial takes place in New York some place close to a 'rov' who sells wine for sacramental purposes.

"Vanity Fair," in its November issue, presents seven children of genius in a page of pictures. They are all American citizens between the ages of seven and thirteen, and have already attained distinction in the arts. Four are Jews, one is Irish, one Italian, and one English. If the Right Rev. George Exton Lloyd, Anglican Bishop of Saskatchewan, has his way, Canada will never be able to boast such products as the United States still can by virtue of its former liberal immigration policy. The bishop wants to exclude all aliens during the next ten years and favors bringing only Anglo-Saxons to Canada until all foreign-born settlers now here have been Canadianized, that is, poured into one mould.

On another page in "Vanity Fair" is an inquish collection called the "Hall of Fame," where Master Mechanic Henry Ford holds a place of honor: "Because he has changed the whole rural life of America by lowering the price of motor cars; because in his assertions that he would not give ten cents for all the works of art ever created, that "history is bunk," and that the Jews have banded together in a sinister conspiracy to control the United States, he has made some of the most ludicrous statements ever conceived by a public man; because the benevolent paternalism prevailing in his factories is enormously applauded and admired by everyone except his employees."

Barely do we receive from the devastating news that General Ludendorff is a Jew, when we read that Mustapha Kemal, the Greeks dearest enemy, is a direct descendant of one of the followers of Sabbatai Zoi, who became a Mohammedan. He's a very presume public figure that we don't claim, I'm sorry, and do not wish on us unworthy. No one has to insult Henry Ford as yet, but there is still time

"Y" News

Coming

The Y.M.H.A. Juvenile Rugby Team were returned victors over the Ravinas in their semi-final game last Saturday afternoon. One of the best and most closely contested games of the year. The final score of 16 to 14 just about indicates the play. The "Y" boys showed that they could spot their opponents 6 points and then come back and win out, as Ravinas scored an unearned touch in the first two minutes of play, but from then on the "Y" boys showed they had the spirit to win in any sort of game. The "Y" now play St. Aidans for the championship of the city juvenile series.

For the "Y," the playing of Freeman and "Big Boy" Richmond stood out, but the rest of the team were not far behind.

The Y.M.H.A. have entered two teams in the T. and D. basketball league—junior and juvenile. George Lister, who is looking after basketball for the "Y," is to have two of the best teams in the city. He has had all of last year's St. Christopher's team to pick from for a start, and there are plenty of other boys in the gym who will be heard from also.

A house basketball league has been started, and the competition is sure to be very keen as the boys take to basketball as a duck takes to water. Any member of the "Y" is eligible to enter any of the teams. Just send your name in to the secretary and she will do the rest.

The girls have not been forgotten when athletics are talked of. A girls' basketball team has been formed, and will enter one of the city leagues. The team, which is sponsored by Miss "Bobby" Rosenfeld, is sure to take some beating as they certainly know the game. Any teams wishing to arrange exhibition games can do so by writing to the secretary of the Y.M.H.A.

A girls' bowling league has also been formed and will start next week. The Brandeis girls, winners of last year's championship, are to have tougher opposition this year as the girls of the other clubs have been training for some time. Watch out for some of the Goldie Greenwalds in this league, as the girls are some bowlers.

The men's bowling tournament, which will start next week, has already attracted over forty entries. Some of the boys in this league are considered to be the best in the city. This league is for members of the Y.M.H.A. only. Suitable prizes will be given to the winners.

The "Y" boxers have started training in earnest for the coming city championships, and a half-dozen boys can be seen working out three times a week. A good showing is sure to be made by the "Y" if spirit counts for anything. The first of the season's boxing tournament held by the Y.M.H.A., will be held at the "Y" Building in the early part of December and is open to any Jewish boxer in the city. A big entry list is expected.

Do Not Forget

The "Y" dance which will take place at the Oddfellows' Temple, College Street, on Thursday evening, November 23. Tickets $1.00; dancing from 9 to 1 o'clock. Bodley's orchestra. Proceeds of this dance to go to gym. equipment.

As the weeks go on, the Saturday night dances at the "Y" become more popular. They are real community affairs, and the nominal fee that is charged permits one and all to participate in the enjoyment of the evening. The music is good—if we do say it.

On Sunday evening, November 19, Dr. Gordon Bates will lecture to the young men of the community at the "Y."

Canadian Zionist Conference to be Held in Toronto

The Canadian Zionist Federation are holding their Conference in Toronto, Sunday, November 26. Members of the National Executive and delegates from various parts of Canada will be present. Sessions will be held all day, at the Zionist Institute. Mr. A. J. Freeman, National Chairman; Mr. A. Livin, Treasurer; Mr. Louis Fitch, Vice-Chairman, Mr. Leon Goldman, Secretary; Dr. Aramovitz, Mr. L. Phillips, Mr. Garber and Dr. Shayne are among those who will attend.

HADASSAH

Final arrangements are being made by the committee of the Central Chapter of Hadassah for the matinee to be given Wednesday afternoon, November 22, at the Academy, Bloor Street West and St. Clarens. Afternoon tea will be served.

The Deborah Chapter of Hadassah are having a towel shower in aid of the Palestinian Hospital, on Sunday, November 19, at the home of Miss Annette Levy, Bathurst Street, for their members and friends.

The Western Chapter of Hadassah gave a successful bridge on Wednesday, November 15.

The Daughters of Zion are holding a bridge and whist at the Inglenook Tea Rooms, on Tuesday evening, November 21.

The Rose Chapter of Hadassah, which met at the home of Mrs. D. Dunkelmann, 56 Rowanwood Avenue, will hold a shower at the home of Mrs. H. Miller, 2 Chestnut Park Road, November 23.

A mass meeting will be held in the evening, the place and list of speakers will be announced in next week's Canadian Jewish Review.

Y.P.L. Elections

The annual elections for the Young People's League of the Goel Tzedek Synagog will take place at an open meeting on Sunday evening, November 19, at 8.30 p.m., in the vestry chambers of the University Avenue Synagog. The elections will be accompanied by an interesting literary and musical program. A list of candidates was published in last week's issue of the REVIEW. Further nominations will be accepted at this meeting. All members and friends are cordially invited to be present.

HERZL ZION CLUB

N. W. Jacobs, cousin of S. W. Jacobs, noted Canadian parliamentarian, is to speak at the club-rooms, Sunday evening, November 26, on "Shakespeare and the Jew." A prologue, in which several members will participate, is now being rehearsed for this event.

A stag is announced for Saturday evening, December 2, at the club-rooms.

The house bowling league is in full swing with six teams practising every Tuesday at the College Bowling Academy.

A well known University of Toronto professor will lecture this Friday evening.

TALMUD TORAH LADIES' AUXILIARY

The first meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Talmud Torah, held in the synagog chambers, was well attended. Rabbi Jacob Gordon and Mr. B. Nathanson addressed the meeting, emphasizing the need of the women's co-operation in the campaign. Cantor Saitz rendered several vocal selections.

RAYMOS GIRLS

The semi-monthly of the Raymos Girls was held on Sunday, November 12, at the home of Miss Lillian Winberg, St. Ann's Road.

MAIL BOX

Editor Canadian Jewish Review:

While agreeing with Dr. Bricknet in his editorial view than an attempt to prevent Paderewski playing would be criminal folly, and being sure that the Jews of Toronto will never do such a foolish thing, I feel impelled to take exception to his statement (in the editorial of October 13) that the history of Poland "is besmirched with bigotry and prejudice." No present-day animosity should blind us to historical facts, and the truth is that the Jews in the Middle Ages were better treated in Poland than in any other country of Europe. And Poland was in this respect better than most other countries of Eastern Europe even in modern times.

In the terrible massacres of the middle of the seventeenth century, the barbarous murderers were Russians, or as we would call them to-day, Ukranians, the victims being both Jews and Poles. And even to-day, when tolerance and humanity seem to be lost virtues there, the worst pogrom-maker whom Poland produced, General Balachowitz, despite his claim of accidental Polish citizenship, is a Russian.

Neither ought we to forget that the greatest leader of the Poles in the last century, Prince Adam Czartoryski, was friendly to the Jews and admonished his son to remain their friend, for he understood, as every enlightened statesman of Poland must understand, that Polish prosperity is possible only when the relations between Poles and Jews are amicable.

The violent hostility of the Poles is of recent origin. Clever agitators like Roman Omowski, with the help of fanatics and dupes Paderewski being the most conspituous among the latter—fanned the flame of bigotry to obtain political advantage which they could not otherwise gain, and which they have since lost. The help of experienced Polish-American politicians, like Smulski of Chicago and Fronczak of Buffalo was of no avail; all of which would make a pretty story if it wasn't—another story.

The best friends of Poland, and of the millions of Jews who live there and must remain there, hope that all this will blow over, and are glad to notice signs of improvement. Conditions in Poland are slowly but unmistakably approaching normalcy, and he is the worst enemy of the Jews as well as of the Poles who incites to the awakening of passionate hatreds on this side of the ocean, or to any act of recklessness which is sure to lead to deplorable results on the other side.

An Open Letter

To our subscribers and friends:

We need two hundred volunteers, strong in MIND and in HEART, to capture two thousand new subscribers to the Federation.

The time has come when the present membership of the Federation can no longer carry the financial burdens of providing adequately for its ten affiliated organizations. The Federation has about one thousand good-standing members. It should have at least three thousand members in order to cope successfully with our numerous philanthropic and social problems.

We appeal to you, subscriber, who believe in the Federation because the Federation is the only organization which can accomplish big and constructive things in a community. We now call upon you not to give money but to render a great service. We need your ammunition of HEART and MIND to strike and penetrate into the hearts and minds of those who are not yet subscribers of the Federation.

A campaign is being organized for the early part of December to secure two thousand new members for the Federation. We appeal for two hundred volunteers to participate in this campaign. Will you be one of the volunteers? Will you be one to help in a great cause?

Please Remember

We have hundreds of families in our midst who are in dire distress. We have hundreds of neglected and dependent children. We have widows, orphans, sick and aged, who need our help. We have numerous problems of delinquency, wife and child desertion, and other problems which require a great deal of personal service. The Juvenile Court, the Mothers' Allowance Commission, the Board of Health and other non-Jewish organizations, expect our co-operation in order to bring about a healthier and happier community.

We need a great deal more money for the Family Welfare, New Orphanage, Maternity Aid, Big Brothers, Girls' Club, personal service, and other important activities. Every Jew, who is able, should be a subscriber to the Federation, hence this campaign and call for volunteers.

If you are one of the volunteers, please send in your name to the office of the Federation. WE AWAIT YOUR HEARTY RESPONSE. YOUR CO-OPERATION IS INDISPENSIBLE.

Thanking you in advance for your courtesies and whole-hearted co-operation, sincerely yours,

S. B. KAUFMAN,
Executive Director,
Federation of Jewish Philanthropies.

Editor,
CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW:

A Jewish hospital will shortly be opened in Toronto. We believe this event is bound to have an important bearing on the life of Toronto Jewry, and therefore beg leave to make some comment accordingly.

We consider a Jewish hospital in Toronto a vital necessity. Toronto has not nearly enough hospital accommodation. With only one bed to every four hundred of population, the hospitals are overfilled and many sick have to stay at home for lack of room. With forty thousand Jews, Toronto needs at least one hundred beds for Jewish patients. The Jews in Toronto in the past have done next to nothing to provide this accommodation. They have provided for their old ones, they are providing for their young ones; their sick ones they are leaving entirely to the mercy of their Gentile fellow-citizens. Why so? Practically every American city of any size has a Jewish hospital of its own. Why not Toronto?

The Jewish hospital will readily be maintained. It differs from other charities in that it has an income of its own, and the public has only deficits to cover, not the whole bill. With proper management, it can be made almost self-paying. The initial outlay only has to be immediately considered, and for this the women of the Ezras Noshem Society have nobly and successfully raised a large sum. It is a small beginning, as all beginnings are. With proper support from all other Toronto Jews, this can, and we hope, will be multiplied so that a proper and efficient hospital will be made possible. Buffalo has just laid the cornerstone of a million-dollar Jewish hospital. What about Toronto?

The Jewish doctors of this city are willing and anxious to devote their time and energy to make this hospital a medical success. The Jewish hospitals on the other side are among the leaders in their class, and some rank among the foremost of the continent. In time, the same success may be attained by our Toronto hospital.

Many Jewish patients [illegible] the best of care and attention, are unhappy and ill at home, [illegible] language and customs, and [illegible] take of non-kosher food, much to their dislike. Many again, have such [illegible] feelings of a strange hospital that they remain at home to their [illegible]. Were these poor, unfortunate patients given more congenial Jewish surroundings, the tender care of Jewish nurses, and the devoted attention of a Jewish medical staff, to whom they could freely tell their complaints, their Jewish hearts would be ever more thankful.

Sir, a Jewish hospital is a real necessity. The Jewish hospital in fact is a reality. The Jewish doctors, we are sure, will make it a medical success, if the Jewish public is willing to make it a financial success. The women began it. Will the men help to finish the good work?

Yours respectfully,

JEWISH BIG BROTHERS AND JEWISH BOY LIFE COUNCIL AMALGAMATE

A new step of great portent to the problem of delinquency among our Jewish boys has been taken by the Jewish branch of the Big Brother movement and the Jewish Boy Life Council. After months of contemplation on this subject, a joint meeting was called at the suggestion of Mr. E. M. Blanckensee. The proposal to amalgamate and co-ordinate the work of the two organizations was accepted with much enthusiasm, and to-day amalgamation is a fact, and justified both by the increased strength and enhanced vigor shown in the activities carried on in this work among our Jewish boys.

Prior to amalgamation, the Jewish Big Brothers were devoted almost solely to the taks of recreating the environments of a boy after delinquency was a fact. This work, though in great measure unavoidable, may be compared to locking the stable door after the horse has been stolen, for in many instances delinquency can be minimized by providing clubs for the boys where the evil influence of street and gang are removed. All that the Big Brothers could hope to do was to prevent further delinquency on the part of the offender. And here again the club was a great asset in training the boy to better ideals and conduct.

The work of the Jewish Boy Life Council, however, was to go into the very heart of boy life, wherever boys were to be found, and to teach them from early youth the qualities requisite for worthy citizenship. While the Big Brothers usually waited until the boy committed an offense and was placed on probation to them by the Juvenile Court, the Boy Life Council took hold of the boy before he became an offender, in order to prevent delinquency in the first instance. The Council formed the boys of our Jewish community into clubs and furnished them wholesome interests to displace the unwholesome attractions of evil companionship and misleading temptations. This Council was brought to life, thanks to the untiring energy of Mr. M. M. Cohen, assisted by a few earnest young men willing to give up a large amount of their time to this worthy object. The club meetings were held under the guidance of volunteer workers called mentors, younger boys being formed into "Wanderers" clubs and the older boys into "Men of David" clubs.

On the face of it, the two organizations could not do otherwise than amalgamate, as their aims were of so like a nature. It was moreover found that in providing a new environment for delinquent boys, the Boy Life Council was of great assistance in furnishing clubs where boys on probation to the Big Brothers could spend their evenings to advantage. Aside from this, amalgamation strengthens the Big Brother work by making the mentor a Big Brother and drawing him into closer contact with the problems of local delinquency.

The joint meeting where the two organizations amalgamated, was held last month, and the following officers were elected: M. M. Cohen, honorary president; E. M. Blanckensee, president; B. Miller, vice-president; J. Montagnes, recording secretary; J. Weil, treasurer; and Miss J. Bronstein, executive secretary.

The new organization at once turned to its new activities with great vigor. Permission was obtained from the Board of Education to use the Strathcona and Orde Street schools for three nights a week for boys' club meetings. In the Orde Street School, the "Wanderers" meet on Monday evenings, under the mentorship of M. W. Williams, supervising mentor; J. Montagnes, L. James, M. Beder, Weinreb. The "Men of David" meet on Wednesday evenings, under the mentorship of M. W. Williams, supervising mentor; L. Katz, assistant supervisor, T. Lavine, B. Miller, S. Rosenbaum. At the Strathcona School, all clubs meet on Thursday night, under the leadership of I. Lyons, supervising mentor; L. Weil, assistant supervisor; B. Kosky, M. Cohen, J. Weil.

The clubs are now pursuing a very attractive program of both physical and cultural training lectures, and other forms of instruction necessary to make the boys into real men are already provided for, and the sponsors of the new movement are looking eagerly forward to a year of real accomplishment.

THEATRE

LOEW'S YONGE STREET

A good crook melodrama with a brand new angle is a rare and pleasing thing in the movies. "The Face in the Fog," featuring Lionel Barrymore and Seena Owen and with Lowell Sherman heading the supporting cast, is said to furnish just such a story. The picture will be seen at Loew's Yonge Street Theater all next week. Headlining the vaudeville is an aggregation of famous stars of by-gone days in "The Old-Timers."

"The Face in the Fog" was adapted from one of Jack Boyle's popular "Boston Blackie" stories. Lionel Barrymore is seen as the famous crook. However, in this story, "Blackie" has reformed and is leading the life of a respectable citizen of New York. Quite innocently he and his wife, "Mary," become involved in the schemes of a gang of international crooks to rob an expatriated Russian princess of her diamond heirlooms.

"Blackie" at once jumps into the swim on the side of righteousness and, adapting some of the stratagems and tricks of the trade that he learned during his sojourn in the underworld, foils the villains, after a series of hair-raising and unusual adventures that take one behind the scenes in Broadway night life.

Lionel Barrymore is said to do some of the best work of his career as "Boston Blackie." Mary McLaren, former Universal star, is "Mary," and Seena Owen is seen as the princess. Lowell Sherman has an important role.

The Chinese government has conferred upon Mr. Ferno J. Schuhl, former commissioner of the United States Court for China, the fifth class of the Order of the Chiaho for distinguished services rendered to the government. MONTREAL

Not so very long ago one of the Federated Charities Organizations conceived the brilliant notion of taking some pictures of conditions "as is" in the homes of the different applicants. Which is the prologue. Now for the story. Bright and early one fine morning our hard-worked friend, the Social Investigator, set forth on her rounds of calls, even as she had done day after day for seventy times seven days. But on this day of days 'twas not the same, for by her side marched a Pathé Camera Man. Together they trudged through rear alleys and labyrinth passages and up narrow stairways into plastered kitchens. Throughout it all, the voice of the Camera Man was heard in the land. And there had never been such doings before. Whereas formerly the Social Investigator had become terribly enraged just because Mrs. Vichofsky had neglected to make the beds for three successive days, on this day of days, upon noticing that the floor was unswept and the children unwashed, she just smiled and said, "Wait a minute, please," and called in the Camera Man. You see, this particular Social Investigator had a sense of the fitness of things. She wanted the Camera Man to take a picture that would be typical of all the sordidness, the filth and the untidiness of the homes in her charge. So that, when she turned up a shaky wooden staircase and came upon the two-room abode of Mrs. Katerovsky, there was a certain expectant something in the air. Nor was she disappointed. The breakfast and dinner dishes straggled dirtily over the table onto the ledges of the sink; the floor was covered with a week's accumulation of filth; on a bed in a corner near the stove played the dirtiest, sickliest infant, and undismayed midst all this sat Mrs. Katerovsky, horrible, dirty, unkempt, clad in the relic of what had once been a kimono. At the entrance of the Social Investigator she looked up dully. Oh, so she was here again. Such a heart of stone she had! Always as soon as she comes in, quicker than a minute and she opens the windows! What should she care if they die of pneumonia? But what was this? Instead of opening the windows, the Social Investigator turned to her and said: "We would like a picture of your kitchen, just to show people how badly the walls need repairing. I'll be right back. I'm going for the man who takes the pictures." Exit the Social Investigator. Now it is doubtful whether Mrs. Katerovsky knew what it was all about; certain it is, though, that she caught the word "picture." That was enough. To have one's picture taken was the beginning and the end of all things. . . . The Camera Man was cranking away at some kiddies in the yard, so that a full ten minutes elapsed before the Social Investigator with the Camera Man at her heels re-entered the kitchen. The S.I. stopped short at the door. Wonder of wonders! She gulped once, twice and a third time. Words failed her! Such a sight as met her eyes! The bed had been pushed out of sight, the baby and the dishes were washed, and there was Mrs. Katerovsky herself, clad in a black skirt and a shiny blouse, furiously sweeping the floor.

As an outcome of the recent kosher meat troubles which agitated the Jewish districts in the city, there has been formed a Montreal Jewish Community Council, with temporary headquarters established at 555 St. Lawrence Boulevard, where a representative is to be found every evening from 6 to 8 o'clock.

Montreal Jewry, as represented by sixty-five organizations, synagogs, fraternal societies and loan syndicates, recently met at the Baron de Hirsch Institute for the purpose of considering the best means to be used to regulate the Jewish community affairs of the city, not only the kosher meat problem, but that of the equipment of the Talmud Torahs and of the education of Jewish school children. A temporary committee of eighteen, consisting of six representatives of each of the three main groups represented at the meeting, were appointed to work out a plan of elections.

The committee of the Consumers' League, which has been functioning in the matter of kosher meat, is still acting until the organization of the Montreal Jewish Community Council is completed. The temporary Community Council appointed consists of Messrs. A. Klein, D. Sperber, J. Guttman, D. Schwartz, S. Solomon, B. Weiner, L. Albert, R. Epstein, C. Shacher, L. Solomon and Rubin. On the Committee of Eighteen are the following: Messrs. Suki, Velikovitch, Sapolski, Zuker, Dickstein, Finklestein, Strota, Klein, Beril, Schwartz, Frankel, Sloves, Goodman, Silver, Rabinovitch, Pressner, and Mmes. Wasbord, Davus and Lafig.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Tuesday afternoon last in the Shaar Hashomayim Synagog, when Rev. Dr. Abramovitz united in marriage Miss Nellye Kolber, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Kolber, and Mr. Harry Gordon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Moses Gordon of Westmount. The bride was given away by her father, and wore a gown of silver brocade, handsomely trimmed with pearls. The court train was of silver, and her veil of silver and orange blossoms was arranged in cap effect. She carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lilies-of-the-valley. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Charles Kert, of Ottawa, who wore a blue sequin gown over silver cloth, a picture hat to match, and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses. The bridesmaids were Miss Queenie Kolber, Miss Anna Gordon and Miss Rae Aronson. Mr. Charles Kert, of Ottawa, was best man, and the groomsmen were Dr. Moe Kolber, Dr. J. Rosen, and Mr. Ben Robinson. The gifts to the bridesmaids were silver vanity cases, and to the groomsmen gold cigarette holders. In the evening a reception was held at the Shaar Hashomayim Hall, which was largely attended by the immediate relatives and numerous friends of the bridal couple. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gordon left later on a month's trip to the Southern States. On their return they will reside in the Vimy Apartments, Sherbrooke Street West.

Rabbi Brickner Speaker at First Joint Y.M. & Y.W. Meeting. Membership Campaign Started.

A membership campaign of the Y.M. and Y.W.H.A. was launched Sunday. Mr. Benjamin Fox urged that every effort should be put forward to obtain new members. The need for the co-operation of everyone was very great, and response from all supporters of the Y.M. and Y.W.H.A. was asked for. The following will compose the teams. Messrs. J. Smith, S. Lepofsky, S. Caplan, K. Smith, B. Edelson, S. Roodman, Max Bregman, D. Bilsky, G. Caplan, H. Pearl, C. Slonemsky, R. Edelstein and B. Fox. Messrs. J. Abelson and C. Caplan were appointed captains of the business men's teams. Ladies' teams will be made up from the following: Misses F. Smith, A. Golub, F. Lecovin, B. Benewick, L. Cohen, R. Goldsmith, F. Feller, B. Black, Mrs. B. Edelson, Misses Lessie Caplan, E. Richter, H. Kaminsky, Rose Max and Rose Richter.

Rabbi Barnett R. Brickner, of Toronto, was the first speaker at the first open meeting this season of the joint Y.M. & Y.W.H.A. The meeting was presided over by Mr. Benjamin Fox, the newly elected chairman of the literary committee, who, before introducing the speaker, gave a brief outline of the work to be undertaken during the coming winter. This is to include several lectures by prominent Jewish speakers, essay competitions, inter-Y debates, oratorical contests, and public speaking classes. Mr. Fox asked for the co-operation of the members in the work which he and his committee, composed of Miss Drazin, Miss Fanny Zivian and Mr. R. Edelstein, have undertaken for the coming season. The chairman also assured the members that the board of directors were seriously considering the purchase of a new building, and it was hoped that something more definite would be announced in the near future. "Why Should the Jews Survive" was the subject of Rabbi Brickner's interesting address. He showed that the Jews had survived in spite of ages of persecution and attempted assimilation or conversion. Israel replied in a number of ways to this question. Rabbi Brickner believed in the theory that the world needs the Jew and urged his hearers to become aware of the purpose for which the Jew lived. The meeting was opened with the playing of Hatikvah, with Miss Pauline Gould at the piano. Following Rabbi Brickner's address a most pleasing recitation was given by Miss Lillian Levin. The singing of "God Save the King" brought the meeting to a close.

Mrs. R. Kaminsky, Donalda Apartments, has returned from Montreal, where she spent several weeks with her daughter, Mrs. H. Sabloff.

Berlin, F. Carlofsky, E. Ellis, S. Ellis, L. Friedman, F. Ginsberg, L. Ginsberg, F. Hanser, S. Korn, A. Levine, J. Progrosh, M. Progrosh, E. Sugarman and G. Sugarman, and Messrs. D. Caplan, S. The Bar-Mitzvah of Charles Singer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Singer, took place last Saturday at the Rideau Street Synagog. The Rev. I. Singer, of Montreal, grandfather of the boy, conducted the service. On Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Singer received in honor of their son. The out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. L. Sinclair celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of their marriage last Tuesday, a dinner party followed by a largely attended reception taking place at their residence, 120 Powell Avenue. Mrs. Sinclair wore a Parisian gown of black sequins over black satin. During the evening Mrs. M. B. Margosches contributed vocal solos, and violin selections were given by Miss Rosie Sinclair, Mr. Fogle and Mr. Brisbois. Miss Ross presided at the piano. Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. Ross, Miss Dolly Ross, Miss C. Herman, of Toronto, Mrs. A. Clanan and Mrs. C. Taylor, of Winnipeg, Mr. and Mrs. A. Sinclair, Mr. and Mrs. F. N. Sinclair, Mr. and Mrs. B. Sinclair, Mr. and Mrs. Shulman, all of Montreal. At the reception Mrs. Ross and Mrs. A. Coplan presided over the table and the ices were served by Mrs. Leiken. Assisting in the dining-room were the Misses Ross, Sinclair, Herman, Shulman and Pullan.

At the monthly meeting of the Prince David Chapter, I.O.D.E., Mrs. M. B. Margosches, the Regent, gave a report of the recent Provincial Chapter meeting in Kingston, at which she was one of the Ottawa delegates. On Armistice Day, Mrs. Margosches deposited a wreath of poppies for the Chapter at the foot of the Cenotaph erected on Parliament Hill.

A meeting of the executive of the Disraeli Chapter, I.O.D.E., was held on Wednesday evening, when it was decided that the Chapter should join the other Chapters in the city in the sale of poppies previous to Armistice Day, and should lay a wreath on the Cenotaph. Mrs. L. Leiken, second vice-regent, laid the wreath on behalf of the Chapter.

In the Junior League Basketball game played on Saturday evening between Chelsea and Y.M.H.A., the latter were defeated 29 to 25. It was a hard fought game, the teams being well matched, and was a sportsmanlike exhibition all the way through. M. Goldsmith and S. Goldberg were the stars for the Y.M.H.A.

cloth, fashioned on the long-waisted lines with bouffant hips. Her hat was of black pressed velvet and she carried a bouquet of Columbia roses. Mr. Harry Finkleman, brother of the bride, acted as best man.

Following the ceremony, dinner was served at the Canadian Pacific Hotel to about one hundred and fifty guests, the bridal table being centered with the wedding-cake, roses and chrysanthemums.

Mr. and Mrs. Lippman left on the 10.45 from Winnipeg, via Moose Jaw, Minneapolis and Chicago, for Los Angeles, where they will reside. The bride travelled in a stunning dress of navy blue Poiret twill, combined with grey canton crepe, over which she wore a handsome wrap of grey squirrel. A smart Paisley turban model completed her costume.

Mrs. Charles Finkleman wore a beautiful gown of brown brocaded chiffon velvet, black velvet hat finished with an ostrich mount, and a corsage bouquet of Ophelia roses. Mrs. Slobinsky, aunt of the bride, wore a handsome black chiffon velvet and lace dress, black velvet hat and corsage of American Beauty roses. Miss Yetta Finkleman, sister of the bride, was daintily attired in maize and blue georgette over silver cloth and a bandeau of silver leaves in her hair. Her wrist bouquet was of Richmond roses. Mrs. S. Shapiro, of Boston, Mass., cousin of the bride, wore a black silk lace gown, black velvet hat and corsage of American Beauty roses.

The groom's gift to the bride was a platinum and diamond wrist watch; to the bridesmaid a sterling silver vanity case and to the best man a gold fountain pen and pencil.

A BEARSTED STORY

It is said that Lord Bearsted laid the foundations of his fortune upon the accident of an illness. Many years ago the doctors diagnosed his condition as being extremely serious—so runs the story—and counseled his taking a long sea voyage. Mr. Marcus Samuel, as he then was, elected to go to Japan, where he had some comparatively small business interests. When he was there a proposition was made to him in reference to oil which, however, he refused to consider because he thought the condition of his health was such as not to warrant his undertaking fresh business responsibilities. He returned to England, and his physician found him so much improved in health that it was determined later on that he should take another voyage, and again Mr. Samuel elected to travel to Japan. The offer of the oil business was again brought before him, and this time he considered it—and, in fact, has been considering it ever since. As we say, this is as the story goes, and it may be apocryphal. Still, these little narratives do not get about without there being something in them, just as there is never smoke without fire. So we expect that Lord Bearsted is one of those lucky individuals who built up fortune on misfortune.—London Jewish World.

La Vita Italiana, a periodical owned and edited by the anti-Jewish journalist, Signor Preziosi, publishes an article which charges that the Jews have gained control in practically all governmental services. A table of statistics show that there are 64 Jews in the Chamber and Senate, 25 in the Privy Council; 54 in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, 11 in the Ministry for the Colonies, 317 in the Ministry of the Interior, 308 in the Ministry of Justice, 470 in the Ministry of Finance, 267 in the Ministry of War, 117 in the Ministry of Trade and 532 in the Ministry of Posts and Telegraphs, making a total of 3,259.

redeem our reputation in that respect. Like the Russian Jew Antokolsky, he is destined to make a permanent place among modern sculptors of note.

"On this last fact the critics of the French capital seem to agree unanimously. Whatever the interpretations placed upon his work, there is only one opinion as to its importance and that is that he stands in the first rank both as a portrait sculptor and as a delineator of general themes.

"Patlegean is not of the type of Jew whose vague connections with his people must reach three or four generations for definition. He is a Jew of the Ghetto, a Kishenoff Jew who lived through the pogrom of 1903 and still bears in his soul the scars of that murderous episode. It was this event, in fact, which first inspired the boy (such he was then) with his first theme, 'Massacre,' and first unleashed in him the restless passion for self-expression which led him to art.

"Helped by Baron Guinzburg, whose attention had been called to the boy's talent, he went to study in Switzerland, where, at the end of a year, he carried off the first prize awarded by his school and then he went to Paris, where he worked for seven years in private ateliers and in the Ecole des Beaux Arts. He was as hard a worker as an inspired one. He gave himself up to the mastery of every detail of his art. He wanted no rough and ready productions but work polished and complete.

"Since 1908 Patlegean has been exhibiting in Paris to an ever growing circle of admirers. His success was not won overnight, but by honest and studious achievement, which makes it all the more certain that his reputation is an enduring one, and not a passing fancy soon to be forgotten.

"Patlegean has been given the distinguishing name of 'the sculptor of the soul.' This definition is a strictly relevant and descriptive one. Patlegean has the particular faculty of bringing out in the individual the characteristics of his soul. His portrait will be a faithful likeness—and something more. It will be a revelation of the man.

"The same characteristic runs through his general work. Take for instance his group 'Clowns and Pierrots' which aroused discussion in French art circles. You see there not only the individual clown, the man, the jester. You see also a type and a soul, a division of mankind, an eternal classification.

"Patlegean has had numerous and distinguished subjects for models. Kerensky sat for him and of him Patlegean produced a bust which drew much attention at the Salon of 1921. Milinkoff has sat for him. Mahler, the famous German composer and conductor, and Reginald de Koven also sat for him. Of his bust of Antoine, the director of the Paris Odéon Theatre, Tristan Bernard, the famous art critic, said: 'Patlegean has made him more immortal than any academy could make him.'

"Patlegean to-day is thirty-two and in the prime of his power. He has not yet reached his zenith. In the years to come he, without doubt, will surpass himself and enrich the world with such work as will lift the Jewish name to an honorable place in the world of plastic arts."

Three Jewish law students passed, with honors, their examinations at Bagdad this year.
